WORKSHOP

Inclusive Community Resolution—Mayor Menna explained that there had been a call for Red Bank to reaffirm its commitment to inclusivity and diversity. He said there was a proposed resolution for the Council to consider.

Councilman Whelan reviewed his work with the Human Relations Advisory Committee (HRAC) and their accomplishments. He reviewed his own relationship with members of the immigrant community. He noted he also served as the liaison to the Police Department. He noted the Committee had already put forward an Inclusive and Welcoming resolution that the Council had adopted in 2007. He said he feared a new resolution could lead to a false sense of security. He also said he wanted to note that the Council could not tell the Police Department how to enforce but said they answered to the Attorney General and the Federal Government.

Mayor Menna said all of the Council were sensitive to the same issues. He said despite perceptions in the press, Red Bank would not be considered a “Sanctuary City” and could not direct the Police Department to do anything except abide by the law and apply it equally and fairly to all.

Mayor Menna read, “A Resolution Reaffirming the Borough’s Status as a “Welcoming and Inclusive Community.”

Councilman Zipprich thanked HRAC Chair David Pascale and the Committee for their efforts.

Councilman Whelan pointed out that Red Bank had a diverse Police Department and reviewed the Department’s policy. He said he did not know what the resolution would add. He said it offered no authority to do anything of substance. He again commended the efforts of the HRAC and the Red Bank Police Department.

Councilwoman Horgan said it was just be reaffirming and said 2007 was ten years ago. She said she felt they needed to address the concerns of the community. She said she felt the resolution was clear about what the Borough could and could not do.

Councilman Whelan said he felt they should work on issues where they could make a dramatic impact.

Councilwoman Horgan said she agreed but said she felt every issue was important.

Councilwoman Schwabenbauer said there was not a word in the resolution that she disagreed with and said she was proud that it had been done ten years ago before it was a national issue. She said people present at this meeting understood that it was not a Sanctuary City resolution but pointed out that the Mayor had noted that it had been mischaracterized by someone he spoke with earlier in the day. She said she had had dozens of people contact her on the issue and, with the exception of just a few, they all called it a Sanctuary City resolution. She said she was concerned that people would think it was a Sanctuary City resolution and that it would offer some type of protection that it did not. She called for more promotion of the 2007 resolution to make everyone aware of it.

Mayor Menna said they could not be any clearer than what was stated in the draft resolution which said Red Bank would stand by the precepts that were contained in the law against discrimination. He said he agreed that the Council spent a great deal of time on impactful issues but said he felt it was also importance to pass resolution to express concern over other issues.

Councilman Yngstrom said he thought it was the Council’s job to explain to the public what the resolution meant. He said if someone called a Councilmember, it was on that Councilmember to explain which he said he felt was their job as elected officials.

Councilwoman Schwabenbauer said she did not disagree but noted the people she had spoken with were a drop in the bucket. She said the vast majority of the people would not get the word.

Councilman Taylor said he had also spoken with several people and said most were not aware of the 2007 resolution. He said he had also been contacted by several non-Red Bank residents and he was concerned that it could have a negative affect on the business district since many had said they would not come to Red Bank if the resolution was adopted.

Councilman Zipprich clarified that the HRAC was advisory only. He said the entire committee had spent a great deal of time on research and had been very thorough. He stressed that it was not a Sanctuary City resolution in any way but said he stated that Red Bank was an inclusive and welcoming community.

Councilman Whelan said he agreed with everything that Councilman Zipprich had said and commended the HRAC for their efforts.

Mayor Menna called for a straw poll to see if there was consensus to add the resolution.

Councilwoman Horgan, Councilman Zipprich and Councilman Yngstrom were in favor.

Councilman Whelan, Councilman Taylor and Councilwoman Schwabenbauer were not in favor.

Councilman Whelan said he would rather table it. He said he did not feel they should have to vote “yes” or “no” because Red Bank already all of the things stated in the resolution. He again said he felt it was not needed and that it meant nothing.

Mayor Menna asked if he felt the 2007 resolution should be rescinded if he felt it meant nothing.

Councilman Whelan noted that the 2007 resolution was in place and again said he felt taking action now could offer a false sense of hope.

Mayor Menna said it was their job to inform and educate people. He said many were not aware of the 2007 resolution so they would be reaffirming and educating on the issue.

Councilman Zipprich said the resolution would bolster what was done by the Council members in 2007.

Councilman Whelan said the meaning of the phrase “inclusive” have changed between 2007 and 2017.

Mayor Menna said that was a valid point. He said what had changed since 2007 was the world and the law and he said he felt the matter did need revisiting.

Mayor Menna noted that the straw poll had resulted in a three/three vote. He said he would break the tie in favor of adding it to the agenda.

Green Team – Councilman Taylor reviewed the town’s status in the Sustainable Jersey program and the need for a Green Team. He said the Environmental Commission had met and approved a list of names for the team. He said he would forward the information to the Clerk to prepare a resolution for the next Council meeting.

Councilwoman Horgan asked if they represented both business and residential as the previous Green Team had.

Councilman Taylor said they had representatives from across the Borough including businesses, residents and Borough staff.

PUBLIC COMMENT—Ordinances on Resolutions Only

Mayor Menna opened public comment on Ordinances on First Reading and Resolutions only.

Ben Forrest—16 Locust Avenue—asked about the resolution on inclusivity. He said he was in support of it and urged the Council to vote “yes.” He said symbolism mattered. He cited the current tone in the Country and how it affected Borough residents. He said he felt it was important to reaffirm the Borough’s commitment to the people in town. He said it should not be a party issue.

Kate Triggian—22 Leighton Avenue—said she felt there was misconception on the issue. She said she felt that it had been clarified that it was not a Sanctuary City resolution. She noted that things had changed since 2007. She said she felt it was double talk to not reaffirm. She said one should agree or disagree. She said she was concerned that if it was tabled, it would give racists the feeling that they had “won.”

Suellen Sims—10 Harris Park and Ellen Herman—11 Vista Place—said they were founders of the Greater Red Bank Women’s Initiative. Ms. Sims said they had grown to 600 members. She said they were in favor of the resolution and read a statement of support.

Ms. Herman said she disagreed with Councilman Whelan regarding the resolution causing a false sense of security. She said she felt symbols could also starts wars, expose the truth and set people free. She said it was important to deliver the message to the immigrant population that they cannot correct how they came but they can be accepted as human beings.

Ms. Sims presented a petition that she said had been signed by over 300 people in support of the resolution.

David Pascale—59 Madison Avenue and HRAC Chair—said he wanted to address comments including the fact that it had no purpose because it had no legislative teeth. He noted that the Council had previously passed resolutions to state the Council’s stance on a particular issue and offered examples. He said the resolutions would signal to the residents a position on quality of life and the value of inclusion.

Monica Urena—President of the Dreamers Plus organization at Brookdale—said she wanted to address the false sense of security issue. She said since Red Bank had already stated it was inclusive, she could not see the issue with reaffirming that. She said she would be happy to explain the matter to the community.

Jay Herman—11 Vista Place—said if the resolution had been provided by the HRAC.

Mayor Menna said it was an edited version with the same intent.

Mr. Herman said he couldn’t see what was missing.

Mayor Menna said it was the statistic reporting issues.

Mr. Herman said the 2007 resolution was completely different from the current version. He said, in regard to Councilman Whelan’s concern about creating a false sense of security, there was a need to reach out to one third of the community to express that the Council was on their side. He said it was important to show support. He said it was a moral issue. He asked the Council to think of how Martin Luther King or Anne Frank would have voted on the matter.

Sue Visconti—19 Morford Place—when it first came out she was concerned about the optics of it being considered a sanctuary city resolution and the impact it could have on the schools and population. She called on the Council to do more to help people become citizens. She said she understood because she was often judged on her appearance. She said she hoped their opposition was not just political.

Bill Brooks—77 Tower Hill Avenue—said there was a need to let the community know that a resolution had been done in 2007 before they enacted another resolution. He also reviewed the Police Department oath that included the pledge to uphold the Constitution. He cautioned the Council not to contradict.

Anthony Young—39 Highland Avenue—said he wanted to comment that the nets at Eastside Park were in bad shape.

Councilman Yngstrom said new equipment was being ordered.

Mr. Young said taxes were too high and noted there were issues with the water service. He said the assessments were a disaster. He criticized the resolution and said he felt it could have a negative impact on property values. He said he felt it was careless that the HRAC was allowed to bring it forward.

Boris Kofman—28 Riverside Avenue—praised the HRAC for drafting the resolution. He said he felt it was important to show respect to all citizen. He said he hoped for a unanimous vote.

Mark Gregory—109 Bank Street—said he was excited about the proposed park at Sunset Avenue. He said he had concerns about children and safety and cited overcrowding as an issue.

Mayor Menna said health and safety was the preeminent concern. He said if Mr. Gregory had confidential information, it should be forwarded to the Code Enforcement Office. He said they wanted to see those issues rectified.

Mr. Gregory—said he felt Red Bank had the best Code Enforcement in County Councilman Whelan asked the Police Chief to review the Department Policy.

Chief McConnell said he had no concerns with the resolution. He said he agreed that it was important to communicate and said he agreed that it could cause a false sense of security. He said he worked with the HRAC when they were drafting the resolution. He said there would be a time when ICE came into town because of criminal activity or other criteria. He said the Police Department would support them. He said he was concerned about the optics that could cause them to lose credibility. He spoke of efforts to spread the message and concern about how it would be received.

Ms. Herman asked if the Federal Government provided funding for that assistance.

Chief McConnell said they do not but neither did any other agency that assisted in Red Bank. He said the Departments did not operate that way.

Mayor Menna noted that the Department was guided by the Attorney General of the State of New Jersey. He said there was a mutual assistance protocol.

Chief McConnell said, when a crime occurs, their first call was to ICE. He said the agency assists Red Bank more than Red Bank assists them. He said he was citizens who were viewed as assisting police.

David Pascale—noted that the 2007 resolution was done to establish a partnership with the National League of Cities.

Bill Meyer—12 Monmouth Street—said he want to speak about the CAP ordinance and asked it was being done as a way to avoid the cap on a property tax increase.

Mayor Menna asked CFO Poulos to explain.

CFO Poulos said it allowed the Borough to bank the amount the Borough was under the cap up to a maximum. She said the town was not necessarily going to use it.

Mr. Meyer said previous years had seen increases of five to six percent. He urged the Council to avoid anything over the two percent cap and questioned expenditures. He also asked about the ordinance that would guarantee the RiverCenter loan.

Attorney Cannon said the loan was from the DCA to RiverCenter. He said the Council had previously taken action by resolution but the DCA required an ordinance.

Mayor Menna added that the ordinance included language that stated, in the event of a default, the loan expense would be passed on to the district tax payers not the residents.

Mr. Meyer discussed parking garage issues and addressed his concerns about the pending development proposals.

Mayor Menna said they could not discuss that matter.

Mr. Meyer said he was concerned that the public was being left out of litigation matters. He also said he would like to see RiverCenter direct more money toward the parking problem.

Anthony Tiedeman—239 Spring Street—asked about parking at Marine Park. He said he had received fines while fishing and called for a permit for boat owners.

Mayor Menna noted that the Marine Park boat slips were offered at a significant savings under market rate and asked if he was also asking for a parking permit.

Mr. Tiedeman said he was asking that they be able to purchase permits or have the fee included as an additional fee with the boat slip.

Mayor Menna said they would discuss it.

Councilman Whelan said they would discuss it in the parking committee.

Councilman Taylor said there had been discussions in both the Parking and Parks committees and said they would work to find a solution.

George Lyrisis—Teak Restaurant—noted they could use MPay to pay for parking.

2017-13 An Ordinance Amending and Supplementing Chapter 490, Planning and Development Regulations, Relating to Parking Contributions.

Mayor Menna opened the public hearing and asked if anyone would like to speak.

Victor Kuo—Temple Restaurant—asked why the Borough was acting on 2017-13 to eliminate parking fees at this time. He said he felt there was no reason since there wasn't a garage. He suggested they extend the moratorium. He said the Council should focus on other issues. HE noted the moratorium had been in place for many years.

Councilman Whelan said he wanted to clarify that the moratorium meant the fees were not being collected.

Mr. Kuo said he understood that but asked that they table the matter until the garage was built.

Anthony Barbera—22-24 West Front Street—said he disagreed. He said the Council should consider it now because there had never been a time that the business district had been so threatened by competing retail areas. He said some of the areas were aggressively recruiting. He questioned where the money was.

Ben Forrest—13 Locust Avenue—asked the Mayor to explain the issue.

Mayor Menna said the ordinance would delete the Borough's parking deficiency ordinance that had been suspended due to economic issues. He said they had been extending the suspension year after year. Mayor Menna said they were holding the Public Hearing on the matter but that he thought it would be going back to the Parking Committee for further review.

Councilman Whelan said the Committee had was ready to move forward with it at this meeting.

Attorney Cannon noted that the change would only be monetary. He said the parking restrictions would still remain in place.

Councilman Whelan reviewed the reasons for the repeal. He said nothing was really changing as the fee hadn't been collected in years. He said applicants would still have to go to the Zoning Board. He cited how the fee could affect even a small business.

Councilman Zipprich also noted that they had been extending the moratorium every six months.

George Lyrisis—Teak/Bistro—said he saw no problem with competition. He said Red Bank needed to resolve parking issues. He said the money was not the issue. He said they were losing businesses because of the lack of parking.

Victor Kuo—Temple Restaurant—noted the number empty properties. He said people were leaving town. He questioned why people were leaving if the moratorium was a factor. He again called for an extension until a garage was built.

James Scavone—RiverCenter Executive Director—said everyone agreed that there was an immediate concern about the parking inventory. He said the moratorium and/or fees were not related to increasing the parking inventory and would not get a garage any faster. He said the fees had put Red Bank on an uneven playing field with other retail areas. He said there were a couple of misconceptions about the moratorium. He said he had heard people say that if the town brought the fees back that they would automatically have more retail return to Broad Street. He said he had also heard that property owners actively seek out restaurants. He said that neither was true. He discussed how fees could affect different types of businesses.

Jay Herman—11 Vista Place--said the reason to act on the ordinance now was because it was a wet blanket on renting space and, while it was in place, the threat existed that it could return. He said George Lyrisis had turned away from a project because of the parking fees. He said one of RiverCenter's prime successes was that they had drawn business owners that though of the community as a whole rather than just their own needs. He said he felt Mr. Lyrisis and Mr. Kuo were only considering competition for themselves and not what was best for the whole town.

Victor Kuo—Temple—said he was a team player and worked many hours with the Red Bank Business Association. He said competition was good and again urged the town to keep the moratorium and tie it to a garage.

George Lyrisis—Teak/Bistro—said he disagreed with Jay Herman's comments and said he welcomed competition. He said he was concerned about losing business because of people circling and looking for spaces.

Boris Kofman—28 Riverside Avenue—asked how many RFPs had been received.

Mayor Menna said they had received five responses but they could not discuss them.

Anthony Barbera—22-24 West Front Street—urged the Council not to bring back the fees.

AUDIENCE

Freddie Boynton—365 Shrewsbury Avenue—said he respected the Police Department but wanted to bring up an ongoing issue with parking in the area of West Bergen Place.

Mayor Menna said he understood they had been enforcing.

Mr. Boynton said there was still an issue in the area due to work being done and called for more enforcement.

Mayor Menna said it must be enforced.

Mr. Boynton said he also respected the Council but questioned why they had scheduled a public meeting at Pilgrim Baptist Church. He said he felt it should have been at a school. He said he still had concerns about the location of Sunset Avenue as a park and said he would be getting a petition and a lawyer. He again questioned the Borough's relationship with Pilgrim.

Mayor Menna said he appreciated his comments. He commended Councilman Yngstrom on his efforts. He said there would be other meetings in other locations. He said there was an extraordinary amount of money being contributed by the State for remediation. He noted they were nowhere near putting a shovel in the ground. He said he did not think the DEP would clear the project until they were completely satisfied.

Mr. Boynton discussed problems at a property in Long Branch.

Cindy Burnham—71 Wallace Street—said she had a message from Tom Labetti who was not able to attend the meeting. She said he wanted to ask for a comment on the tax appeal suit pending with Riverview/Meridian and the issuance of protective orders. She asked Attorney Cannon to comment.

Mayor Menna said Mr. Cannon was not the attorney on the matter. He said it was being handled by the Borough's tax appeal attorney. He said he would get back to her on the matter.

Ms. Burnham questioned the amount Riverview contributed in a Payment In Lieu Of Taxes (PILOT) agreement. She said the matter could be huge for Red Bank.

Attorney Cannon said it was a huge issue throughout the State. He reviewed the matter and said, generally, protective orders dealt with financial information.

Ms. Burnham said she had been unable to get answers on the matter.

Mayor Menna said the matter had been referred to the litigation attorney and was currently begin litigated. He said, until they had a report from that litigation attorney, there was nothing to tell.

Ms. Burnham asked how long he expected that to take.

Mayor Menna said he could not forecast how fast or slow the Tax Court of the State of New Jersey would move. He again explained that it was a confidential matter and explained the reasoning for that.

Ms. Burnham asked if Attorney Cannon had been the campaign manager for the democrats in the previous election year.

Mr. Cannon said he had helped with the campaign.

Ms. Burnham asked if it was only last year or the year before also.

Mr. Cannon said it was just last year.

Ms. Burnham asked if he had been in charge of getting money to run the campaign.

Mr. Cannon said he had not. He said he had been responsible for organization.

Ms. Burnham asked if he had been voted in unanimously by the democrats.

Mayor Menna and Borough Clerk Borghi confirmed that the vote was unanimous by the entire Council.

Ben Forrest—16 Locust Avenue—said he wanted to revisit the issue with the camera that had come up at a previous meeting. He said he would like to see the Council develop a policy and reviewed points that he would like to see covered. He called for the Attorney to apologize to Ms. Burnham. He recapped the events of the previous meeting.

Attorney Cannon said it was his job to protect his clients. He said his client had felt uncomfortable. He said he probably could have handled it better. He apologized to anyone he may have offended and said he would like to move past it.
